

who is KEVIN?

Kevin Kaiser has a remarkable sense of what is really going on, what is most likely to occur and what's possible—for people, for teams, and for organizations. It is for this sense he is often called, a corporate intuitive.

Kevin is a coach and confidant to CEOs who know more is possible in their own lives and for the organizations they lead. The power of this relationship is in the recognition of gifts and abilities that have gone unrecognized and the mitigation of liabilities and weaknesses. The partnership between CEO and intuitive allows the best of what can be known about a situation in an excepted way to combine with what can be known in an unexpected way—creating a more whole perception of possibilities and pitfalls.

Kevin is one of three founders of the Kaiser Institute, an organization that equips people with essential skills for the future. Among its newest initiatives is the Alembic, a program that teaches the 13 elements of transformation. The word Alembic comes from alchemy and means container of transformation. The Alembic began with 20 founding CEOs from innovative health systems.

He is also the creator of the Kaiser Institute's Program in Intuition—a nine-month fellowship for executives wanting to evoke their intuitive abilities.

Kevin is often referred to as “the most fun person we've ever worked with,” and is known for the power and charisma he brings to every situation. He is inspiring, adventurous, and seeks to help others live a more purposeful, blissful life.
